Plainsmen Pigskin Prospects

By Bill Beckwith

ALUMNEWS SPORTS EDITOR

IT WAS a fine looking squad of football players that reported to Coach Ralph "Shug" Jordan for the opening of fall practice on September 1. In fact, some sideline quarterbacks believe this array of talent is the finest in the 10 years since Jack Meagher opened his 1942 session.

Though somewhat smaller than it has been in the past 10 years, numbering approximately 60 for varsity competition, the 1952 contingent seems to have more speed and poise than in the past. The speed will be the greatest asset and the additional experience will be richly enjoyed as the Tigers tackle a murderous schedule.

Auburn opens its 1952 agenda with two of the best Split-^{"T"} teams in the nation in Maryland and Mississippi, on September 27 and October 4, respectively. Following these two powers they face Wofford, Georgia Tech, Tulane, Florida, Mississippi State, Georgia, Clemson, and Alabama.

What the experts say

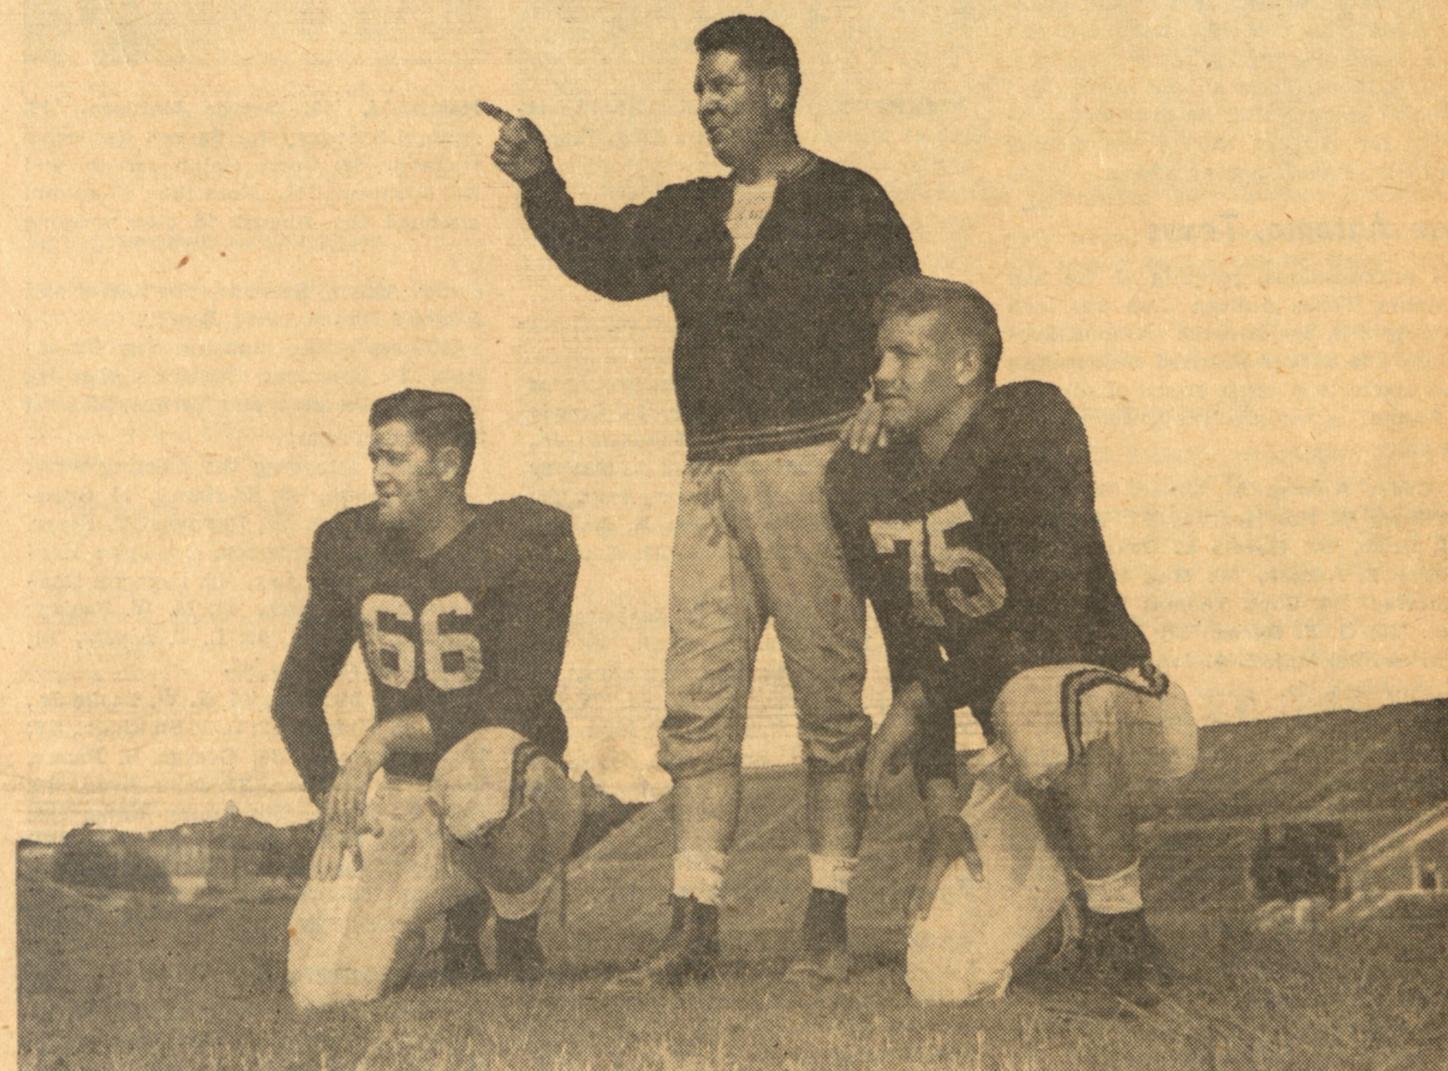

THE TIGERS stock apparently rose very little in the eyes of the football predicting experts in spite of winning five of their 10 games in 1951, because the newsmen's forecast for Auburn is the cellar position of the Southeastern Conference.

In spite of this prediction, Coach Jordan is far more impressed with the 1952 team than he was a year ago when he took the reins. "We'll be stronger for many reasons," says the Tiger mentor. "Of course, the majority of the other teams will also be stronger and our 'won-loss' column at the end of the season might not equal our 5-5 record of last season. However, we like this team and know that they will make Auburn proud."

Possible starters

IT IS still too early to name a starting team but many of the boys who won positions during spring training will probably open against powerful Maryland. Divided into two units, offensive and defensive, the spring drill team looked like this: (offensively)—Ends—Preston McCarty and Jimmy Long; Tackles—Don and George Rogers; Guards—Ed Duncan and Foy Thompson; Center—Guy Bruce; Quarterback—Vince Dooley; Halfbacks—Bobby Freeman and Jackie Creel; and Fullback—Herman Howard. Defensively, the Tigers had: Ends—Bill McMurry and Jimmy Cline; Tackles—Bill Turnbeaugh and Sam Hanks; Guards—Bill Kilpatrick and Al Brame; Linebackers—Jack Locklear and Ed Newby; Halfbacks—Percy Alford and Herbert Jordan; and Safety—Bobby Jordan.

However, the six months since spring drills can make a lot of differences. Lee Hayley, who lost his scholarship because of marriage, is going to play without school aid and will be a strong contender at end. Hayley caught 33 aerials last season for a new Auburn record and was both as a serviceman and a short while as a freshman at Auburn. Dillion's high school in Harpster, Ohio, did not have a football team so his grid experience is badly limited.

The offense will probably revolve around Dooley at quarterback. His potentials as a runner, passer, and defender are so great that Tiger mentors find it hard not to compare him with former Tiger greats. However, the lack of publicity will be an advantage for the quick-thinking junior because he won't have to live up to any comparisons.

Instead, Dooley is an individual performer who thrives on team play and sets an example for his teammates to follow. Because of Dooley's fine footwork, Auburn is shifting toward the Split-^{"T"}. This is ideal for the Mobile youngster since he is especially effective on the running-option play. As a passer, he has many superiors but few can run with the deception he showed last year when often trapped while attempting to throw. Defensively, Dooley was second in the SEC in pass interceptions; third in kickoff returns, and fifth in punt returns. He made the second team All-SEC defensive eleven.

Turnbeaugh leads line

THE DEFENSE will revolve around the marvel of the Plains, Tackle Bill Turnbeaugh. A "hear 'em, feel 'em, and grab 'em" tackle, Turnbeaugh's vision is so bad that he can't recognize his own hand in front of his face without his specs. This sounds detrimental, but it is really advantageous. Instead of looking for the ball, the 225-pound giant follows the pressure of the blockers which always leads him to the ball carrier. Backfield faking by the opposition means nothing to big Bill, simply because he can see nothing but blurred movements. He is the guardian on the left side of the line.

Turnbeaugh is Auburn's top All-America choice, gaining that honor from early predictions by Collier's magazine. Coach Jordan calls him the best defensive tackle he's ever coached and feels that he will lead

News From Auburn Clubs

Clubs buy records

A NEW project for Auburn clubs was recently originated by two Auburn clubs when they purchased record albums of "The Songs of Auburn" for their local radio stations. The Atlanta, Georgia Auburn Club and the Chattanooga, Tennessee Auburn Club purchased nine and three albums respectively for their local stations.

These albums of "The Songs of Auburn" were recorded by RCA-Victor and are selling for $3.75 each plus twenty-five cents for mailing charges. The albums feature songs by the Auburn Band and Auburn student choral groups. They may be ordered from the alumni office.

Secretary Joe Sarver said that he is "pleased with the way that clubs and individuals are buying records for local radio stations. These albums being given to local stations will be excellent publicity for Auburn during the coming football season," Sarver added.

Auburn In August

AUGUST was hot and sultry. As the dry days rolled by students became restless for the closing of the long, parched summer quarter. Even the nearby lakes offered little or no relief from the unbearable heat.

But inspite of the heat the campus was a hub of activity. More than 400 youngsters came to the Plains for a week with the Music Clinic. The new girls' dorms neared completion on Bullard Field. Badly needed steel arrived during the latter part of the month and work on the Union Building resumed.

A ruling by the Council of Deans abolishing pre-registration generated additional heat among students. But when final plans for fall registration were announced most students seemed satisfied with the new plan.

Weekly step sings and community services continued to attract large groups throughout the month. And as the quarter moved rapidly to a close Auburn prepared to greet more than 1,000 Flying Farmers in 500 planes during the last week of August and school officials prepared to greet a record-breaking peacetime enrollment in September.

Enrollment increase likely

AS OTHER colleges across the nation prepare for a sharp decline in enrollment, early indications at Auburn point to a healthy enrollment of upwards of 5,500 men and women students with the opening of classes on September 29. It now appears certain that all records for women students at Auburn will be broken.

Approximately 1,500 girls will be enrolled for the fall quarter. Of that number more than 1,150 will be living in dormitories and the rest will be day students and town students.

In order to house all the girls already enrolled, Auburn is planning on using all the present Quadrangle dormitories, five new dormitories, Auburn Hall and Alumni Hall. Original plans did not call for using Auburn Hall and Alumni Hall for girls, but the demands for enrollment of coeds have been so great that it will be necessary to use both of them.

Already the 931 rooms in Magnolia Hall have been reserved by men students. There is a waiting list of applications for rooms in Magnolia. More than 1,230 men will live in permanent college housing.

2,000 applications

REGISTRAR Charles W. Edwards stated that more than 1,400 applications have been received from prospective freshmen as well as more than 600 from transfer students. Indications now point to approximately 2,000 new students this fall. Applications are still coming in daily.

Four of the new girls' dorms will be ready and the fifth will be ready either in time for the opening of school or shortly thereafter. Alumni Hall will also be used temporarily to handle the girls if the other new girls' dorm is not ready when school opens.

For the first time in several years college housing is entirely in permanent style dormitories. The old F.P.H.A. barracks have been torn down. Gone too are the trailers, temporary housing facilities and deck houses of the 1946-50 post-war period. Through the office of Dr. H. F. Vallery, co-ordinator of men's housing, students are finding it possible to find the best rooms in town and landlords have a central agency to work through in obtaining students.

Thus Auburn is preparing for its greatest enrollment in a non-wartime year. The large number of applications from high school students and transfers indicate that Auburn will be an exception among American colleges this year with an increased enrollment over 1951.

369 summer graduates

DEGREES were awarded to 369 seniors and graduate students at the summer quarter commencement exercises held in Cliff Hare Stadium on August 23. Master's degrees were presented to 110 candidates, while 259 senior received B.S. degrees.

Dr. Lewis K. Sillcox, executive vice-president and director of New York Air Brake Co., Watertown, New York, delivered the main address. With a wide background of technical training in America and Europe, Dr. Sillcox has worked for nearly 40 years in the mechanical and electrical engineering branches of American railways.

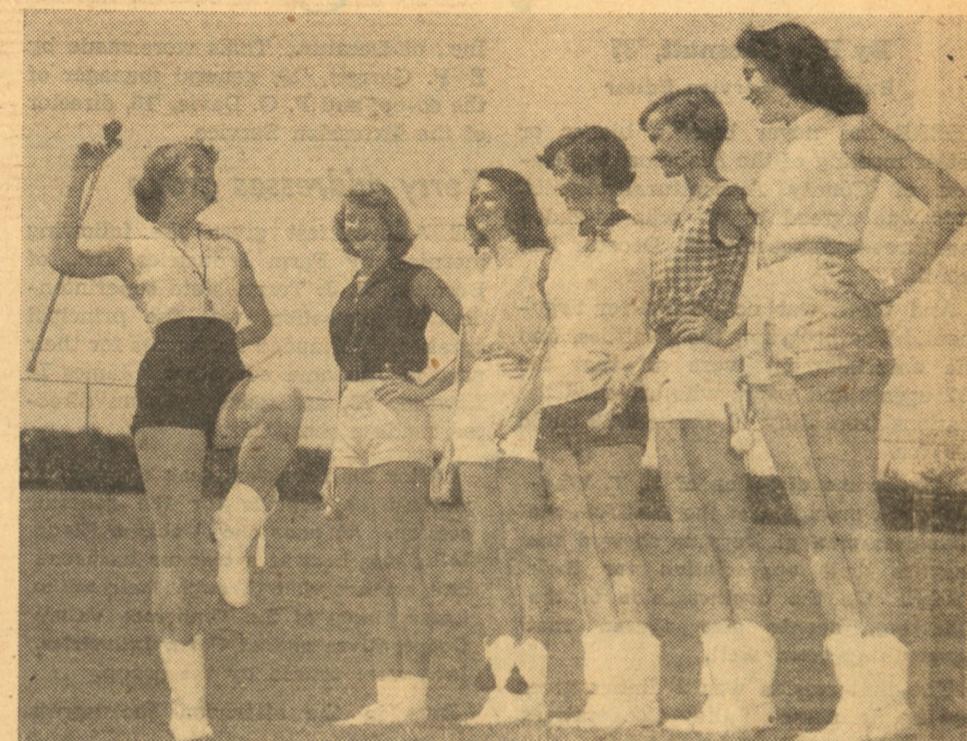

At the commencement exercises the first Master of Arts degrees in the history of A.P.I. were awarded. Authorization of the Master of Arts curriculum was approved by the Trustees in June. Miss Kathryn Floyd Douglass, '49, an English major, and Furman Rogers, '48, history student, received the first degrees.

Also awarded at the program was the first Master of Science in Civil Engineering to be granted since the inauguration of the civil engineering graduate program in the fall of 1951. This degree was given to Henry L. Longcier Jr., '51.

Degrees were conferred by President Ralph Draughon with the assistance of Registrar Charles W. Edwards. A reception was given for graduates, their parents and friends by Dr. and Mrs. Draughon following the exercises.

Second music clinic

MORE than 400 music students of junior high and high school age as well as recent graduates of high school, attended Auburn's second annual Music Clinic from August 3-9. With young students

Colonel Kleppinger has just returned from service in London after work with the organization of the NATO countries. He served at A.P.I. from 1934 to 1939 and in addition to his military duties was coach of the Auburn polo team. Prof. William B. McGehee was one of 54 University of Florida summer session graduates who was selected to membership in Phi Kappa Phi, national honorary scholastic fraternity. Professor McGehee received his Master's degree at the University of Florida on August 16. A former outstanding student at Auburn was appointed as Assistant Dean of Women in August. Betty Wallace Cosby, '46, was named to fill the post vacated by Miss Ruth Wilson, who will do graduate work at the University of Pittsburgh. Miss Cosby comes to Auburn from the University of Miami. She holds a B.S. degree from Auburn, and a Master's degree from the University of Syracuse.

Col. James W. Townsend has assumed the post of professor of Air Science and Tactics at Auburn. Colonel Townsend has just returned from service in Europe.

County Agents Meet In Decatur

By Bob Chesnutt, '37

Extension Service Editor

THERE has never been a bigger or better meeting of the Alabama Association of County Agricultural Agents. This was agreed by all who attended the three-day meeting in Decatur last month.

And there was no reason for argument. The program, the facilities, and the entertainment were all that the 112 agents and wives who attended the sessions from July 17 through 19 could ask for.

Under the direction of L. T. Wagnon, '33, president of the AACAA, the business men of Decatur showed the agents their appreciation for their work. On the business side of the meeting, agents also agreed that everything went well.

The first session was a dinner given by the Tennessee Valley Cooperatives, Inc., of Decatur. Talks were made by E. P. Garrett, '19, general manager of the co-op; and P. O. Davis, '16, director of the Extension Service.

Terry addresses group

AT A breakfast given the following morning by Farm Industries, Inc., of Decatur, W. J. Terry, state superintendent of education, was the principal speaker. He lauded the agents for their part in Alabama education. James L. Lawson, '23, assistant extension director, made a short talk.

After the breakfast each committee worked on reports for the general session. At noon the Alabama Flour Mills was host at a chicken barbecue and a short visit through their mills. Later plants of the Tennessee Valley Cooperatives and of Farm Industries, Inc., were toured by the group.

Late in the afternoon the agents,

NEW officers and directors of the AACAA are, left to right, J. E. Moriss, president; C. P. Granade, vice-president; B. R. Holstun, secretary-treasurer; J. J. Young, R. E. Martin, and W. B. Story, directors. J. C. Bullington, director, is not shown in the above picture. The new leaders will take office January 1, 1953

R. E. Martin, '30, Andalusia, director; W. B. Story, '30, Livingston, director, and J. C. Bullington, '39, Jasper, director.

Among the many features of the meeting was the awarding of an honorary membership in the organization to Edward A. O'Neal, of Florence, who for many years was president of the American Farm Bureau Federation. In making the award, Mr. Wagnon cited Mr. O'Neal's record of invaluable service to farm people all over the U.S.

Three county agents were named to receive distinguished service awards. They were C. M. Ling, '26, Dothan; C. P. Granade, '31, Greenville, and J. C. Bullington, '39, Jasper.

Recent agricultural progress cited

Auburn's Foward March

EDITOR'S NOTE: For an objective and factual report on the work that has been done for Alabama farmers in recent years by A.P.I. read Commissioner Frank Stewart's, '26, front page article in the Alabama Farmer's Exchange Bulletin of August 1. The present Commissioner of Alabama Agricultural and Industries, Mr. Stewart points out the progress by the agricultural workers of A.P.I. as well as the sound leadership which has aided greatly in making the Research and Extension branches of the institution become stronger and more effective.

By Frank Stewart, '26

WE are pleased to note that two big farm meetings—one national and the other state-wide—are to be held on the campus of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute within the next 60 days.

Plans are for about 1,000 flying farmers from 40 states to fly to Auburn in 500 to 600 planes for the annual National Flying Farmers Convention, August 28-30.

And then on September 15-17, between 1,500 and 2,000 Alabama farm men and women will attend the annual meetings of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation and Alabama Council of Home Demonstration Clubs. These two meetings, together with many others including the recent 4-H and FFA Conferences, are significant of the great job Auburn is doing for Alabama, the South and the nation.

Progress under Draughon

IN this connection, we are glad to report to you that under the leadership of President Ralph B. Draughon and his staff of excellent workers, unusual progress has been made in strengthening every phase of work of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute. This includes all three divisions of campus instruction, agricultural research and agricultural extension.

Of especial interest to farmers will be the fact that state appropriations for agricultural research have increased 64 per cent and agricultural extension by 71 per cent since Dr. Draughon became president in 1947. During this same time annual expenditures for agricultural research at Auburn increased $629,420.67 and for agricultural extension service by $632,732.39. To me these figures show that a great job is being done by Auburn officials in trying to help farmers solve their problems.

Strong basic courses

WE agreed with Dr. Draughon when he told us that he believes it is essential to the future success of both agriculture and industry in Alabama for Auburn students to be taught strong basic courses in agriculture, engineering, home economics, architecture, pharmacy, chemistry, veterinary medicine and other basic sciences.

"Surely," he said, "we cannot train research workers in agriculture without very strong teaching in the basic courses and in the professional subjects. We cannot expect to develop good engineers without good faculties in the basic subjects and in the professional fields. We cannot expect to have highly effective agricultural extension programs without exceptionally well-trained and alert workers who can grasp the new truths of research and translate them to the uses of the farm people."

Some research findings

AND now to briefly mention a few research accomplishments which show how Auburn, through its research division, is helping Alabamians, especially the farmers of the state:

With Auburn-developed methods for growing crops found adapted, Alabama farmers are making significant progress in planting more and more acres in crops that can be marketed through livestock. In 1951, farmers used 1½ million acres of planted forage crops for grazing, including sericea, oats, Johnson grass, kudzu, ryegrass, summer and winter clovers, and Caley peas.

As a further index of a progressing Alabama agriculture, farmers in 1950 produced 66 per cent more beef, 62 per cent more pork, and 44 per cent more eggs, and sold 52 per cent more milk than they did 10 years earlier.

Using improved cotton varieties, better fertilization, and newer insect controls, Alabama growers are producing almost as much cotton on 1½ million acres as they did on 3½ million some 20 years ago.

WITH the inauguration of a doctoral program in five departments, the Library at A.P.I. should become the object of the most serious study it has ever been subjected to. Various investigations have been made of the resources, staff, and facilities of the Library, but practically all of them have been at, or below, the master's level.

Now the pendulum swings in another direction and it is necessary to examine the Library from the standpoint of its adequacies or inefficiencies in buildings, facilities, and collections at the research and most advanced graduate level.

Impact of doctorate work

THE impact of a doctoral program on the Library is so great that it is difficult to comprehend. There is a tremendous gap between facilities and resources at the master's level and at the doctoral level. In many departments the Master's degree is not primarily a research degree; whereas, in practically all universities of the United States and Canada the Ph.D. is distinguished by its research aspects.

Therefore, facilities and services at the undergraduate or at the master's level are by no means adequate for the support of work at the Ph.D. level. It is easy to see that with the inauguration of the doctorate program the Library has reached a stage in its development where its opportunities for further development should be unchecked and unhampered.

ment of recent years. Today, there is not a single open-pollinated corn on the Agricultural Experiment Station's list of recommended varieties for Alabama. Seven years just the reverse was the case. Comparing the state's 5-year average immediately before and after farmers began using hybrids, the annual corn yield jumped from 12 to 19 bushels per acre.

An outstanding contribution to the poultry industry is the development and release of a vaccine by the Agricultural Experiment Station that will immunize chickens against coccidiosis—the bane of all poultrymen. It is reasonably cheap, is reliable, and gives a high degree of immunization.

Another development is the Auburn White Leghorn high-producing strain that is less susceptible to common poultry diseases than other strains.

The Agricultural Experiment Station was the first to produce cancer in experimental animals by dietary deficiency. To further explore this field, the American Cancer Society, Cancer Section of the National Institute of Health, and the Nutrition Foundation, Inc., have awarded Auburn funds for additional research.

Its fresh water fisheries research is the most extensive in the world. This

Expanded curriculum has increased

Auburn's Library Problems

By Clyde H. Cantrell

Director of A.P.I. Libraries

AUBURN'S most critical building need at the present is in developing the present Library to meet the demands of the growing student body and the expanding academic curriculum. The present library was constructed in 1908

Library has been distinguished by salutary growth and development; whereas, on July 1, 1945, the Library had 103,929 volumes and a staff of 11 employees, on July 1, 1952, it had more than 170,000 volumes and a staff of 27 employees. In addition, there is a corps of approximately 20 students who work on a part-time basis for a varying number of hours each week, depending upon their needs and the ability of the Library to pay for their services.

Thus, it is easy to see that significant progress has been made; however, the size of the staff, the book collections, and appropriations are still suffering from the lean years of the depression—that period in the history of most Southern institutions when practically no volumes were added. There is still a great backlog of material needed to support instruction and research in the humanities, the social sciences, and particularly in the basic sciences and technical and professional fields.

Survey findings

THE MOST detailed study of the resources and services of the Library is found in the survey which was conducted in 1948 by Dr. Louis R. Wilson, formerly Dean of the Graduate Library School of the University of Chicago, and Dr. Robert W. Orr, Director of the Iowa State College Library.

The surveyors studied every phase of the Library's program, its place in the institute, and made comparisons and recommendations, looking toward a program which, when carried out in toto, would give A.P.I. one of the best libraries in the nation. The published report showing progress made at the Library in recent years still reflects weakness in the collection and services from the depression days.

A great deal remains to be done if the Library is to be sufficiently strengthened so that it may support adequately the doctoral program on which the institute is about to embark. The administration has attempted to do everything within its power to finance the needs of the Library; however, when one recognizes that A.P.I. has a broad over-all curricula covering many graduate, research, and professional areas, it is easy to understand why the Library must be emphasized greatly.

Endowments are needed

NO LIBRARY in the United States has achieved eminence purely from an investment derived from institutional appropriations. The great libraries of the East (Harvard, Yale, Princeton, and others) have millions of dollars of endowment invested exclusively for the use of their libraries. Unfortunately, there has been very little of this type of philanthropy in the Southeast, with the possible exception of Duke University and Vanderbilt University.

Herein rests one of the greatest opportunities which friends and alumni of Auburn may utilize in their efforts and desires to build a greater Auburn, to build a great Library, and to make the influence of both felt throughout Alabama and the nation. There are unusual opportunities existing whereby friends of Auburn may invest in the Library and be assured that such investments will continue to serve the institution and the state for years.

The help of individuals

SPECIAL book collections may be donated in honor and to the memory of loved ones, friends, teachers and associates ates. Gifts of $5,000 or more may be made to the institution with the understanding that the income derived therefrom be invested in special collections to the honor of particular individuals.

The development of the Library resources in the professional fields of agriculture, architecture, chemistry, engineering, pharmacy, and veterinary medicine offers leaders an opportunity to make a significant contribution to the development of a broader and fuller program at A.P.I. Any endowments created in furtherance of such professional schools may be used wisely for the development of the book collection in those areas.

There is no gift too small or too large which will not be received, properly acknowledged, and handled in accordance with the wishes of the donor. Special bookplates will be used to give full credit to donors and to any persons honored by bequests or gifts.

Great need for building

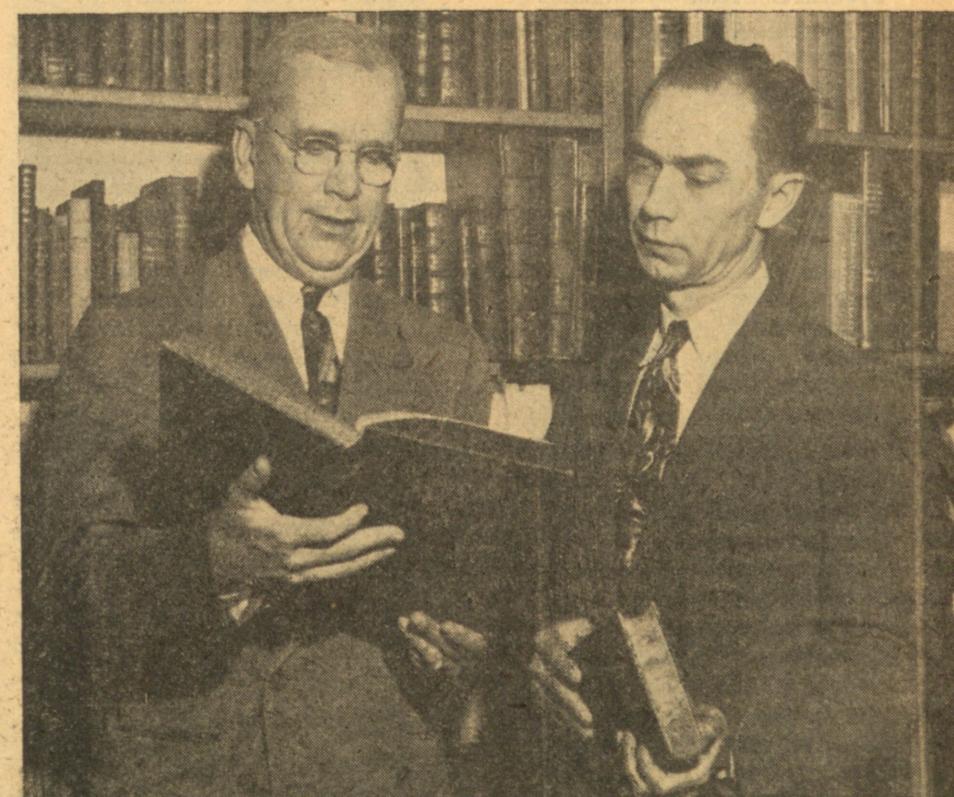

FINALLY, there can be no more lasting and perpetual monument to the memory of an individual, group, or organization than an adequate library building dedicated to the dissemination of knowledge and information among students, teachers, and scholars. At A.P.I. the greatest building need at the moment is perhaps for a centrally located library building.

It should be planned in such a way as to give itself to unlimited expansion and it should be designed for the convenience and easy use of its patrons. It has been many years since such a building has been presented as a memorial to any educational institution of Alabama.

This is an opportunity which will be perpetuated through the years and which will bring honor and distinction to the institution, and such a gift to a great institution would make for its donor or donors a significant place in development of higher education in the South.

Here then are some of the opportunities which friends and alumni of Auburn, as well as business and industrial leaders of the state, have for contributing to the development of an adequate Library and for aiding in the support of doctoral study and research which will make Alabama and the entire Southeast a richer and better land in which to live.

A COLLECTION of valuable old agricultural books donated to Auburn by Edgar A. Hodson, '11, is examined by President Draughon and James G. Baker, assistant director of libraries and head of the catalog department. Such highly valuable donations as these add great strength to any library. With the present doctorate program being initiated at Auburn, the Library must receive a great deal of outside aid if it is to fill its necessary part in Auburn's advanced program the Tiger line this season. "I only hope his radar system is in top mechanical condition," Jordan says.

The team will have plenty of crowd-pleasing color. Diminutive Jackie Creel, 139-pounder, is the smallest and fastest man in the SEC and could be a starter against the Terps. Dillon's feats will also be closely watched after his recent Olympic honors. The brother act of sophomores Don and George Rogers will help cause confusion in the press box since they could pass for twins, despite a year's difference in age. Add Turnbeaugh and the return of the Indian blood to the campus in Chief Ben Lightfoot, and you have real team color.

Offensive Backfield Coach Charlie Waller will unveil Rigas "Wrong-way" Coptsius, a speedy lefthalf. The dark-skinned senior has long been rated one of the team's outstanding runners but never made the Saturday games because of doubt of the direction he would run with the ball. A victim of six different coaches in six years, from high school to college, Coptsius has found each new coach installing a different set of plays about the time he learned the previous coaches' formations.

As a B-team member Coptsius could look at the cards with the plays on them and run over the opposing varsity. Without the cards he might miss a block or run around end when he should be running up the middle. "Funny thing," one coach said, "one day I showed him a card with his play on it and had a red line for his running route. At the end of the line I added 'touchdown,' so he did just what it said and scored. I think he's our top prospect and he'll get his chance this year because we're changing no plays."

Looking over the line

THE ENDS will have terrific Bill McMurry returning for his senior year as a seasoned defensive specialist. Jimmy Long, Jimmy Cline, Eric Sauerbrey, Jim Lofton, Jack Langford, and Hayley give the corps experience. Newcomers with bright futures are sophomores Jim Hall and Bill Larrimore, and frosh Jim Pyburn and Jim Crouch.

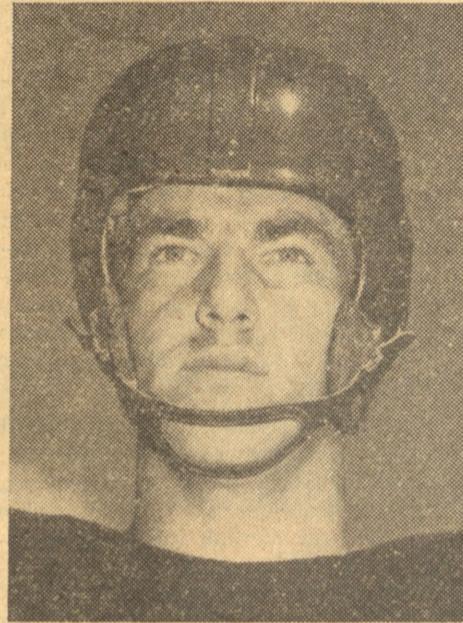

Turnbeaugh and Sam Hanks have control of the defensive tackle positions for the second and final year and will be the mainstays in the line. The Rogers brothers could mean a lot in the "won-loss" column if they develop because of their size and speed (both are 6-5, 230-pounders). Sophomores Jack Clark, and Red Kilpatrick are the chief reserves with frosh M. L. Brackett looking like a fine prospect.

Guard Ed Duncan has gotten national recognition but at the time has plenty of competition from Bob Burns and Ted Neura on the left side. Senior Foy Thompson is reliable on offense and sophomores George Atkins and Al Brame will wage a tussle on defense for the other guard post. Watch incoming frosh Earl Bush, a 240-pound defensive specialist.

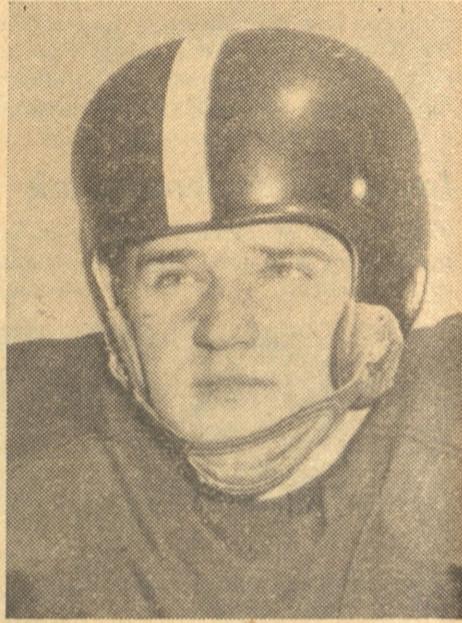

Jack Locklear, the pride and joy of the sophomores, is being picked for the number one center position offensively and defensively by mid-season. However, he must take the backseat during September to veterans Guy Bruce and Ed Baker.

Stronger backfield

NO ONE doubts the ability of Dooley at quarterback except junior Joe Davis and senior Dudley Spence. Both have their eyes on the job and will have a month to prove themselves. Davis led the nation in extra point conversion percentage last year while Spence was the Plainsman kicking specialist. Ready and willing is soph Jim Peerson as well as recently discharged Marine Bill Burbank.

"Wrong-way" Coptsius may take the backseat to Bob Freeman according to early season predictions for the lefthalf starter. Freeman, strong and powerful at 190-pounds, was a whiz as a frosh. Chief challengers are sophomore Dave Middleton and Jimmy Fullington, both swift afoot.

Little Creel is on a red hot-seat with juniors Bobby Duke and Charles Littles as both are proven competitors and have all qualifications at righthalf. This three-way battle is still wide-open and could produce a real problem in selecting a starter.

Fullbacks are abundant with Herman Howard, Charles Hataway, and Dillon. Auburn gained 1100 of the 1988-yards the Tigers netted on the ground last fall from this post. Homer Williams is gone so Howard will get first shot since he sparked during spring training. Hataway will be a real contender as he was a starter at righthalf last year.

Fine freshman prospects

A FINE corp of freshman have been rounded up from the high schools by the Auburn coaches. "The 30-man rule of the conference leaves us in a bad position because it is hard to tell who will make college players," Jordan says.

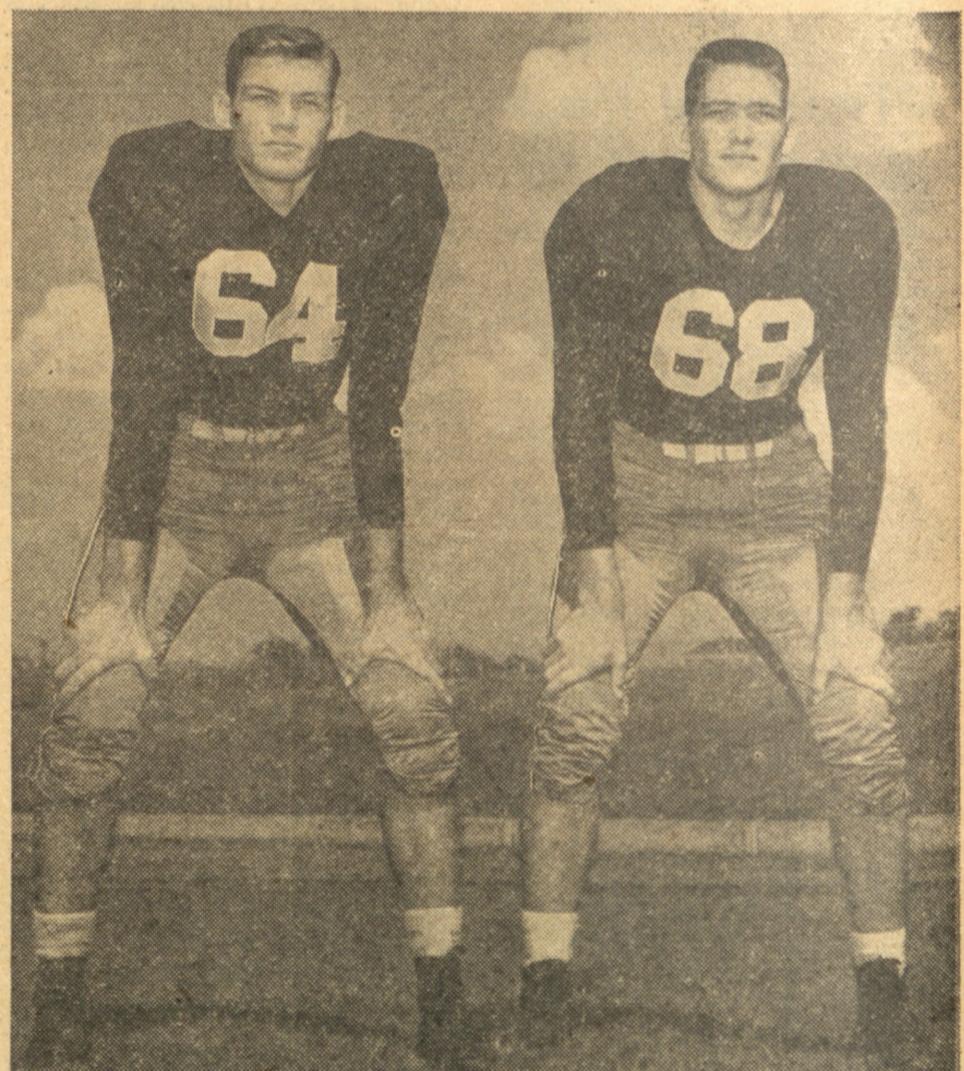

The new rule states that Jordan and all other SEC coaches can play only 30-signees next season in frosh or varsity games. These must be named by the opening day of school in September, only 23 days after practice opens.

Jordan stepped out of Alabama to pluck Georgia stars Ray Mercer, Ed Lawson, Earl Bush, Dolan King, and Al Browning. In August All-Star games in Atlanta, fullback Mercer was voted the "Most Valuable Player" of the Class AA-A game, and fullback Lawson gained the award for the Class B-C game.

Alabama furnishes an abundance of the new crop of prospects. One of the top prizes is Lanett's Fob James Jr., former Baylor prep ace. This speedster is a triple-threat tailback.

From the All-Star game in Tuscaloosa in August, Auburn gets backs Johnny Adams, Joe Childress, Joe Autrey, and

Bill Ward to give color

Hickey To Broadcast Games

ONE of the big question marks in the 1952 Tiger grid plans is how effectively Olympic discus star, Jim Dillion, will be able to perform at fullback this season.

Although having little grid experience, Dillion is a natural athlete who could use his amazing speed and weight (225 pounds) to greatly aid Auburn in '52

BILL HICKEY formerly with Liberty Broadcasting System, will give the play-by-play accounts of all Auburn football games during the fall it was announced recently. Bill Ward, well-known Birmingham sportscaster, will give the color for the games which will be carried over the largest network to ever broadcast Auburn grid contests.

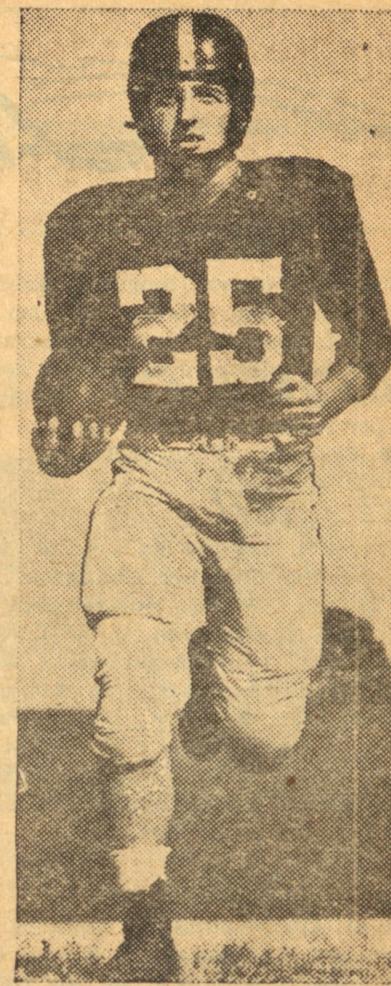

More than 20 stations in Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee will carry the weekly games which are under the sponsorship of Air Engineers, Inc., Birmingham General Electric distributors. The games will originate through radio station WSGN in Birmingham.

Both Bills are well qualified for their assignments. Hickey began his athletic career in North Dallas High where he participated in all sports, and then after three years in the Marine Corps, played varsity center for Harvard. He learned his football under two fine coaches—Dick Harlow and Art Valpey, and was one of the outstanding linebackers in the Ivy League.

After graduation from Harvard in 1950 Hickey broadcast college sports for a network in Texas, and last season he handled the L.S.U. games for the Liberty Broadcasting System.

Bill Ward is familiar to all Alabama sports fans as he has handled the Birmingham Barons baseball games during recent years. In addition to baseball, Ward was color man for the University of Alabama last season and also handled Auburn and Alabama basketball games over a state hook-up last winter.

With more than 20 stations already signed to carry the games, Auburn will get its greatest radio coverage in history in the 1952 season.

Former Auburn grid star

Howard Hill - World's Top Archer

THE WILLIAM Tell legend is far from dead. In fact, Howard Hill, '22, world champion archer and former Auburn football and basketball star, has accomplished enough amazing feats with the archery weapons to out-Tell the famed William.

Not only has Hill, with bow and arrow, shot an apple off a man's head, but he did it three times, and then shot a prune off the same noggin. The assistant rebelled, however, when they wanted to try the stunt with a cranberry.

Hill, who is the star in his own production, the movie, "Tembo," has just returned from a four-month nationwide

I went to school with at Auburn and enjoyed talking with them very much."

Movie star

A STAR of many movies, Hill shows in "Tembo" the actual pictures of many of his dangerous encounters with the beasts of Africa. A native of Wilsonville, Alabama (Shelby County), archer Hill became interested in archery at the age of four when he was first introduced to the bow and arrow. He took it up seriously in 1925. Through the years Hill taught, gave exhibitions, and showed what could be done with the bow and arrow. He has produced 32 shorts for Warner Brothers and three for Paramount, in addition to his recent role as producer-director-main star in "Tembo," and in a movie entitled, "The Last Wilderness." The massive-built Hill also doubled for Errol Flynn in the movie, "Robin Hood."

An archery champion since 1936, he has won 196 field tournaments in bowmanship, and is famed both for his exhibition work and as the "works" behind the well-aimed arrows which delight audiences in Indian-and-cowboy films.

In addition to his skill with archery through the movies the dark-haired giant is also an prolific writer on his profession. "I write for outdoor magazines and also the scripts for movies I act in," Hill stated. "Magazines I have written for are Sports Afield, Popular Science, Field and Stream, Outdoor Life and The Feathered Shaft," he added.

"So far, I have had no books published," the smiling archer continued, "but am now very busy getting a book on archery and my experiences in hunting with the bow. This first book will be called "Hunting the Hard Way." He added that he then plans to "do a book on my African experiences as well as a series of animal stories for young people."

Remembers Auburn days

HOWEVER, in spite of all this activity since his days here at Auburn, Hill has not forgotten his alma mater. His fol-tour with the film which portrays his antics with the bow and arrow while on a 10,000 mile wild game hunt in Africa. While on his U.S. tour he attended several Auburn club meetings and said that he "saw a number of the fellows lowing statement shows something of the place which the world champ archer holds for Auburn in his heart:

" . . . I love Auburn and all the people with whom I was connected there. . . . I think Auburn is the most wonderful college in the world, not that it has the highest educational standards of any, necessarily, but the Auburn Spirit, which no one but an Auburn man can fully appreciate, cannot be duplicated anywhere else on earth."

A versatile individual

AS AN Auburn student Hill lettered in football and basketball. He was a top end on Coach Mike Donahue's teams of 1920 and 1921. Married to Elizabeth Hodges of Ashville on October 31, 1922, he worked as a machinist and tool maker prior to taking up his favorite sport. Mrs. Hill is also an excellent athlete in her own way as she has won four out of five national golf tournaments. Howard plays professional golf also.

From his work as a machinist and tool maker the pleasant six-foot giant has now developed many enterprises with his archery skill. He is the owner and operator of an archery and tackle manufacturing firm; producer of his own movies, The Howard Hill Picture Company, as well as an actor, script writer, and author.

Thrills in Africa

OF HILL'S many exciting adventures in Africa one of his most amazing shots was when he killed an elephant by planting an arrow 31 inches into the work produced the methods for building and maintaining thousands of fish ponds now on Alabama farms. Results are sought by fish culturists of many of the states and from numerous foreign countries.

Through country farm and home agents in each county, the Extension Service division of Auburn is doing an excellent job of carrying usable information to farm men and women throughout the state. Reporting to the Board of Trustees in October, Dr. Draughon said:

"I wish, also, to call to the attention of the board the very fine cooperation that now exists between the Extension Service and the County Commissioners and Boards of Revenue of all the Alabama counties. Indeed, the support of the county agents and their assistants by the county governments in Alabama has increased very rapidly in recent years. This, it seems to me, is an evidence of the high regard for the excellent work of the county workers of the Extension Service in improving the farms and farm homes in Alabama."

This has been rather long, but I thought you'd be interested in knowing of some of the excellent progress being made by Auburn for the farm people of Alabama.

chest cavity of the 10,000 pound marauding animal which was attacking the people and livestock of the Leopard Men in a village where he was living.

Another thrilling encounter was with an enraged lion when Hill was armed only with a bow and arrow. Rather than charging, the lion started stalking Hill. Unable to run or jump due to fright, Howard shot him in the chest cavity. But animals can continue charging even with several arrows in them since the slender shafts do not make deadly wounds always. In this instance, the lion charged, and it was Hill's final desperate shot that caught the beast with an arrow puncturing the brain.

Many other examples could be given of this Modern Robin Hood's encounters in Africa. They show the almost undreamed of courage and timely skill that are necessary to undertake such an expedition. Hunting with a gun permits the hunter to get another shot instantly if the first one misses; if an arrow misses a vital spot, or the mechanics of the bow or arrow break, the archer is in face with instant death. Hill's record for speed is nine arrows in thirty seconds.

Thoughts of Auburn . . .

HILL likes to talk about his favorite school as well as his favorite sport and vocation. A pre-vet student while at Auburn he jotted down thoughts of his days on the Plains. From a recent letter the following phrases caught the eye:

"Auburn was a lot of fun and a great deal of work . . . And a very sore bottom most of the time . . . A shaved head full of scars, of course . . . Saturday morning clinic at vet lab with "Dr. Mac" (Dr. I. S. McAdory) in charge . . . The grand spirit of the school. The element of fair play shown by ALL the students . . . The fairness and sincerity of all the profs. . . . The goodness of John Shirey who kept the rest of the fellows from using boards more often . . . My daily physical and verbal encounters with Ross "Fliver" Ford, Tom Nelson, John Shirey and many other grand fellows . . . The nights after a ball game whether we won or lost. In plain words, all my thoughts of Auburn are pleasant."

Hill is no swash-buckling, unthinking fictional hero. He admits frankly that there were moments of fear and terror on the Africa trip in which he was left a near wreck. But he is a man who has made an unprecedented record of skill in handling the bow and arrow. This record has been built on training and patience. It has made this Auburn alumnus the world's greatest living archer.
